Abstract

The article provides a research analysis of the features of the development of events in 2022 and the degree of their impact on the macroeconomic stability of the Russian Federation, the prospects for the development of domestic business entities, the increase in geopolitical threats and risks, as well as the adoption of a new package of economic and political sanctions by Western countries in relation to the Russian economy and business entities. The article examines the negative impact of the 2022 sanctions on the development of foreign economic activity of Russian enterprises. Possible trends of export and import of products are analyzed. The advantages and disadvantages of the import substitution policy are considered. The negative impact of sanctions resistance on the activities of enterprises and the need for anti-crisis management are analyzed. The trends of changes in the monetary market and the banking system of Russia in the conditions of the adopted sanctions are considered.
